The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,105

It seems that Has-kins had enough of them to put him to the forefront in the Congressional race Saturday.

There must have been a wrenching, tearing sound when John D. Rockefeller paid 30 cents for a cane in Paris the other day.

The men in Tufts college undoubtedly consider co-education a failure, for the women have taken all the high scholarship honors this year.

The annual publication of the Central Vermont Railway Co., "Summer Homes in the Green Hills of Vermont, Islands and Shores of Lake Champlain," is out and copies are sent to all who ask them. The issue this year is more interesting and enticing than ever, and loyal Vermonters who desire to advertise the state, could do no better than send copies to as many prospective visitors as they can.

That was a strange collection at the Republican caucus Saturday night, but so long as they had signed the party affiliation slip they were all Republicans under the definition of the new corrupt practices law. It was due to this law also that a tangle arose which lengthened ten minutes' business into one hour and a half. Perhaps the next legislature will give us a less intricate, more efficient law next time.

DISEASES IN DUST.

A cloud of dust on the streets is offensive in any case, filling the eyes, the ears and the nose, to the detriment of the human body. But how much worse is that dust when it bears in its penetrating sweep those unseen bacilli of disease! The dried filth of the street is gathered in the whirl of the wind and is sprinkled over the clothes, if it is not taken directly into the body by way of the lungs. The sputum of tuberculosis patients must also have released the bacilli of that deadly disease into the accumulations of dirt, and these, too, are carried with the dust into the lungs of the people who must breathe in the dust, as they necessarily must to a certain extent. That this idea is not a mere bugaboo of the sticklers for health is proven by the discussion at the American Medical association in Boston last week. One of the physicians attending the convention declared:

"In all cities the 'dust menace' is no slight one. The pavements and the streets are the receptacles for sputum from untold numbers of consumptives, as well as those healthy or suffering from some other disease, and for offal of various kinds. These lie for days, become dry and pulverized, to be raised by every breathe of air and inhaled without cessation by the helpless passer-by. In the country this is of minor importance, because the sources of contamination are so few comparatively and the interval so great, that sunshine and air are able to complete their task of disinfection. Not so in the city, however.

Here the danger is a constant and an increasing one. Not a few epidemics of acute disorders of the respiratory tract have been traced to such causes, and it is not unreasonable to assume that many cases of tubercular infection are due to the same etiological factor. Therefore, it behooves every municipality to carefully investigate and apply the means of lessening this evil to a minimum."

A pavement is particularly liable to the transmission of the disease in this manner, for the dust is easily swept up from the hard surface and deposited here and there. This has been noted in Barre when dust piles have accumulated on the main street granite pavement and been attacked by the winds. It should be said for the credit of the city officials, however, that rarely is this condition of affairs allowed to exist. The pavement is swept every morning and the accumulations are kept wet down during the day, so that the danger in that section is minimized. But the warnings of the medical fraternity in this matter should be borne constantly in mind.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

The Old Straw Hat.

Bring out, bring out the old straw hat, And hold it up to view.
 Of course, it's yellow and all that, But maybe it will do.
 Some lemon-juice, a new black band, Will fix it up all right.
 The style will do this season, and It's just the proper height.
 What's that? It's gone? What's that you say?
 You burned the old thing up?
 Well, this is my unlucky day,
 Misfortune fills my cup!
 Why, woman, would you have me toil And keep on toiling still?
 Now I have got to go and spoil A new three-dollar bill!
 —Somerville Journal.

And the Crowds.

It might be well for the straw hat sellers to arrange to have police to handle the crowds when June finally arrives.
 —Chicago Daily News.

Tipping.

"Who was it that said 'all men are born equal'?"
 "Oh, the doctors started that."
 "The doctors? How do you mean?"
 "They always insist that the baby 'tipe the scales at not less than ten pounds.'"
 —Philadelphia Press.

Back to the "Sure Thing."

There were fifty-seven entries down In the Cloud Push Brooklyn Handicap.
 Each swift balloon was in the charge Of a celestial racecourse jockey chap; Nobody cared for equine paces, For all were daft on airship races.
 The favorite was a buckskin ship With a sorrel streak upon its side; But I plunked my lonely dollar bill On a craft they called Empyrean Pride.
 I thought that mayhap I had blundered, Thought a winning would bring home a hundred.

The race was on, the ships were off, And through the upper air they sped; And a jockey dropped a bag of sand That broke his fall upon my head.
 But, through the sand my vision straining, I saw my aerial skate fast gaining.
 But, just before the goal was crossed, A gale swept from out at sea And all the ships were scattered wide, And I was plunged in misery.
 The race was off and—oh, the horror! The bookies made off with my dollar.
 So give me back the olden days When horse travelled helter-skelter, And when a man might pay his board With money brought home by a pelter.
 For airship bets tend to dishearten, As long as winds are so uncertain.
 —Denver Republican.

June is the "Negligee" month. Here are Shirts that will add to your comfort every day. There is no check to the popularity of the plaid. For a novel pattern see our scroll designs—soft pleats with embroidery on center panels and cuffs, also three color effects on white grounds, scarfs of one color. SIRE AND SONS.

Senator Piles of Washington never appears in the senate without a white vest and is known as the "white vested senator."

Thomas Shaw, the new lord advocate of London, is a self-made man. The son of a baker, he earned his own living as a lawyer's clerk while attending a university.

General James Grant Wilson of New York has a large old fashioned seal ring which contains hair from the head of Washington, Hamilton, Lincoln, Grant, Napoleon and Wellington.

Professor Calvin of the Iowa State university, predicted an earthquake for the Pacific coast seven days before it came. He told his class in geology that it might be expected there at any time.

Mr. John Redmond, leader of the Irish parliamentary party, makes a practice of being within the precincts of the house of commons from the moment that the speaker takes the chair until the proceedings terminate at night.

George Gerhardt of Florence, Mass., fought for two years in the French army sent by Napoleon III. to Mexico and later on served under Napoleon III. in his effort to redeem his waning fortunes which culminated in the Franco-Prussian war. He emigrated to this country twenty-four years ago.

J. P. Webster holds the unique distinction of being the only mayor Waucoma, Ia., has ever had, though the place has been incorporated twenty-three years. He was selected the first mayor in 1883, and has continued to serve ever since. He has just been elected for two years more, which will make his record as mayor a quarter of a century.

J. E. Henry, a millionaire lumberman and manufacturer, practically owns the flourishing little town of Henryville, N. H. He has held nearly all the offices for years, with one son a postmaster and another a police court judge. Mr. Henry pays 80 per cent of the village taxes. The village has 1,000 population and all the voters except four are in Mr. Henry's employ.

GLEANINGS.

Korea is taking more to beer drinking than either Japan or China.

There are caught annually on the German coast 10,000,000 pounds of shrimps, most of which are netted at depths of thirty or forty feet.

In order to put a stop to the practice of blinding women's feet the Chinese board of education has issued an order prohibiting the sale of small shoes.

Hungry vultures have attacked men and women in the valley of Coucha, canton of Nialia. A bull was so seriously injured in a fight with them that it had to be killed.

Exactly a hundred lives were lost in fires which occurred in London last year. Forty-six of the victims were under eight years of age, and fourteen were over sixty. In almost every instance the fire was due to carelessness and the lack of ordinary precautions.

A British trades unionist has sued for an injunction to prevent the labor organization to which he belongs from levying assessments upon him under pain of expulsion from the union to pay the salary voted a labor member of parliament who belongs to a party hostile to that of the injunction seeker.

Jerry Builders.

In the early part of the last century a firm of contractors named Jerry Bros. carried on business in Liverpool, England, and earned an unpleasant notoriety by putting up rapidly built, showy but ill constructed houses, so that their name eventually became general for such builders and such work in all parts of the world.

Michigan.

Michigan has been called the Lake State for an obvious reason. It is better known as the Wolverine State, from the former presence of great numbers of wolves in its forests.

THE ROYAL BOX.

When King Edward was Prince of Wales he was known in familiar circles as "Teddy Wales."

King Leopold of Belgium delights in a collection of ancient timepieces, one of the most valuable being a master piece which belonged to Marie Antoinette.

The late Czar Alexander III. of Russia was once considerably embarrassed by a circus of performing fleas, sent him by Prince Henry of Reuss as a birthday present.

The young king of Spain is an expert in the use of the sword. When a child he practiced with wooden swords with the young nobles of his court. His marvelous ability was even then noticeable, and he is now considered one of the most expert of the royal fencers of Europe.

What is undoubtedly the largest collection of picture postal cards in the world is the property of the Prince of Wales' eldest son. The collection includes cards from every country in the world and is now growing almost too bulky for convenient handling, there being more than 10,000 cards.

THE AUTOMOBILE.

An English medical authority says fast automobile riding has much the same psychological effect as getting drunk. Automobile temperance might not be a bad plan.—Buffalo Express.

A bill in the German reichstag provides that automobilists must pay life annuities to those dependent on persons killed by their motor cars or to persons permanently injured by such accidents. It sounds like an extreme measure. But is it?—New York World.

Legislation respecting the automobile is new and experimental, but brief experiment has demonstrated the necessity of broader public safety legislation, legislation that will cover all possible conditions, legislation that will protect the prudent automobilist and punish the reckless and negligent.—Schenectady Star.

Corsets.

Women have worn corsets from the earliest times. The mummy of an Egyptian princess who lived 2,000 years before Christ was discovered in 1872, and round the waist was a contrivance closely resembling the modern corset.
